

Broker-Dealer Practice

Greenberg Traurig offers clients one of the broadest and deepest broker-dealer practices in the country. We help our clients formulate strategies and take steps to limit their litigation and regulatory risk. We are also trial lawyers with wide-ranging trial and arbitration experience. The members of our team have collectively tried more than one thousand arbitration cases to final award. We have served as lead defense counsel in hundreds of securities class actions, derivative lawsuits, and regulatory investigations and enforcement actions – including some of the largest and most complex regulatory actions ever filed.

Broker-Dealer Arbitration & Litigation

- Provide counsel informed by our experience representing market-leading broker-dealers to final award or judgment in thousands of securities arbitrations and trials throughout the country, including trying some of the largest arbitration cases to verdict, with numerous matters involving more than $100 million.
- Analyze and explain to judges, juries, and arbitration panels complex issues involving all types of securities instruments, including structured products, partnerships, mortgage backed securities, options, commodities and futures, and hedge funds.
- Handle complex employment disputes in court and FINRA arbitration involving claims of wrongful termination, statutory employment discrimination, whistleblower retaliation, and US defamation, including claims brought in connection with ongoing regulatory inquiries and enforcement actions.
- Draw on a wealth of GT resources to assist in the defense of these matters, including a nationwide arbitrator database, a database of investigators and other support personnel, and an intranet designed for secure, efficient information sharing with clients.

We work closely with attorneys in related disciplines throughout the firm – including corporate and securities, white collar criminal defense, and corporate compliance and governance under Sarbanes-Oxley – to provide clients with a strategic portfolio of counseling and defense services.

Broker-Dealer Practice

The firm's broad Government Law & Policy Practice – along with the many former federal and state prosecutors and former SEC attorneys who practice at GT – enables us to offer clients advice based on not only legal acumen, but also a thorough understanding of the government process.

Securities Regulatory Practice

- Represent broker-dealers, registered individuals, issuers and their officers and directors, accounting firms, hedge funds, and investors in investigations by the SEC, FINRA, state securities regulators, the Justice Department and the states' attorneys general, as well as the CFTC, and banking regulators.
- Conduct internal investigations and compliance reviews for broker-dealers and investment advisers, as well as develop anti-money laundering and internal control policies and procedures.
- Draw on the firsthand experience of our team members who have served as senior SEC attorneys and state securities regulators.

Securities Class Action Defense

- Represent companies and their officers and directors, auditors, attorneys, underwriters, hedge funds, and private equity firms.
- Serve as AIG panel counsel.
- Defend virtually every type of securities claim – from accounting fraud and restatements to hyped projections and missed forecasts.
- Draw on GT's detailed databases of court decisions, briefs, and related topics to help develop defense strategies that are tailored to the facts and jurisdiction of each particular case.

Shareholder Derivative Litigation

- Represent public companies and their officers and directors in derivative actions arising from mergers and acquisitions, executive compensation, and other corporate transactions.
- Draw on our attorneys' broad experience attacking demand futility allegations and the judgment to know when – and when not – to establish a special litigation committee.
- Counsel special or audit committees on evaluating and responding to actions before and after they are filed.

White Collar Securities Defense

- Connect clients with the strategic counsel of GT's 90+ former federal and state prosecutors who focus their practice on criminal and civil white collar securities defense matters.
- Provide counsel to individual and institutional clients directed at securing outcomes that preserve clients' reputations and minimize the impact of proceedings on their ongoing business activities.

Transactional Litigation

- Represent companies, independent directors, special committees, buyers, and sellers in connection with stock-holder class and derivative actions, dissenters' rights appraisal, contests for control, SEC investigations regarding promotion of value of a corporation's publicly traded securities, material breaches of representations and warranties in stock purchase agreements, and other issues.

Securities Litigation:
SEC Investigations & Enforcement

Greenberg Traurig's securities litigators regularly represent companies, accounting firms, broker-dealers, registered individuals, hedge funds, executives, directors, and investors in SEC and other regulatory investigations and enforcement actions.

We have wide-ranging experience guiding our clients through the process of SEC investigations and defending a diverse array of alleged securities law violations.

GT attorneys work closely with our clients to develop and implement strategies that support their business objectives, ranging from aggressive litigation through trial to a quick settlement involving modest concessions.
