Monthly Highlight

In this section we drill down into an interesting trend that market participants are following.

The January Barometer

Welcome to the year of the rabbit! While 2022's year of the tiger was about active energy, this cosmological year will be about relaxation, quietness, and contemplation in the Chinese calendar. Apparently, the rabbit's charm and speed attract qualities such as money, partnership, and success. Last year was a volatile and negative year for markets. Could the rabbit bring markets a smoother and hopefully upward sloping ride in 2023?

Some traders believe that the performance of the S&P 500 in January can predict its performance for the rest of the year – as January goes, so does the year. In light of this January barometer, we thought we would look back in history to see how often this theory held true.

Since 1990, January market performance was positive 58.8% of the time:

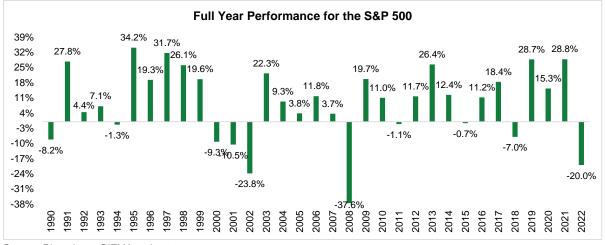

- 20 positive months
  - Ranged from +0.4% to +7.7%
  - 2019 was the best performance at +7.7%
  - 2023 was +6.6%, the third best performance
- 14 negative months
  - Ranged from -1.0% to -11.4%
  - 2009 was the worst performance at -11.4%
  - $\circ$  Last year was negative at -5.9%, the fourth worst performance

Since 1990, full year market performance was positive 69.7% of the time:

- 23 positive months
  - Ranged from +3.7% to +34.2%
  - 1995 was the best performance at +34.2%
- 10 negative months
  - Ranged from -0.7% to -37.6%
  - 2008 was the worst performance at -37.6%
  - o Last year was negative at -20.0%, the third worst performance

Source: Bloomberg, SIFMA estimates

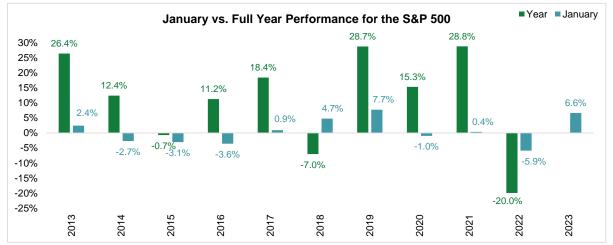

Since 1990, when January posted positive market performance, the full year performance was positive 78.9% of the time:

- 15 years with a positive January and a positive full year
- 6 years with a negative January and a negative full year
- 12 years where the correlation broke
  - o 4 years where January was positive but the year ended negative
  - o 8 years where January was negative but the year ended positive

Looking back over the last decade, since 2013, when January posted positive market performance, the full year performance was positive 80.0% of the time:

- 4 years with a positive January and a positive full year
- 2 years with a negative January and a negative full year
- 4 years where the correlation broke
  - o 1 year where January was positive but the year ended negative
  - o 3 years where January was negative but the year ended positive

2023 started off with a positive January market performance. Will we be going for the 16th positive/positive year? For the three years of the rabbit in this time series – which includes 2023 – all three posted positive January performance. However, the full years were split between positive and negative performance.
